

English Presentations

大学院共通科目
01ZZ305 英語発表

July 22, 30

09:00–16:00

総合研究棟A110
Adv Research Bld A, 110

The ability to communicate effectively to an audience of your peers, is an ability that will serve you well. The powerful speeches of Barack Obama and Steve Jobs took one to the White House and the other to the top of Apple Inc.

Whether motivating a nation, selling iPods, or simply expressing your ideas with clarity, oral communication skills are essential.

Unfortunately though, these are not skills that we are born with. They must be learned, practiced and developed.

This course provides an overview of basic communication theories, and techniques for public speaking and making presentations in English.

Participants will also gain practical experience applying the techniques they have learned to deliver a presentation to the class.

- Registration via TWINS from June 12 to July 12.
- Maximum 30 students, decided by lottery in the case of over-enrolment
- Reading materials will be distributed via manaba after enrolments are finalized.
- This course will be conducted in English.
- For details about course contents contact Matt Wood mattwood@biol.tsukuba.ac.jp